About the Authors

Heather Frederick, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of political science at Slippery Rock University. She received her doctoral degree from West Virginia University. Her primary research interests focus on barriers to the representation of women in American governmental institutions. She is especially interested in women's PACs and female congressional candidates.

Arthur M. Holst, Ph.D., is Business and Government Affairs Manager for the Philadelphia Water Department. He received his doctoral degree from Temple University. His research interests include local government, public works, and the environment.

Robin Lauermann, Ph.D., is an associate professor and Chair of the Department of Politics at Messiah College. She received her doctoral degree from the State University of New York at Buffalo. Her current research focuses on political behavior in the areas of representation and political engagement.

Blyden B. Potts, Ph.D., is an adjunct assistant professor at Shippensburg University, in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology. He earned his doctorate at the University of Michigan. His research interests include structured inequality, lifestyle, formal organizations, and social capital and social networks. In 2006, he was a leader in the Green Party of Pennsylvania (GPPA) ballot access signature effort. From 2007 to 2008 he was Secretary of the GPPA.

David R. White, Ph.D., is an associate professor of political science at Francis Marion University in Florence, South Carolina. He received his doctoral degree from the University of Arizona. His research interests include congressional development, particularly in the U.S. Senate, and the origins and growth of "presidential advance" (the White House office and staff that prepare and manage presidential trips and public events).
