About the Authors

John A. Bozza, JD, MA, is Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Sixth Judicial District, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and formerly President Judge. He is also a faculty member at the National Judicial College, University of Nevada at Reno and the New Judges School of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Recently he was a member of the editorial board of the Pennsylvania Public Health Law Bench Book. Prior to taking the bench Judge Bozza served as an Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at Gannon University.

Alberto J.F. Cardelle, PhD, MPH, is an Associate Professor of Health and currently serves as chair of the Health Studies Department and faculty assistant to the Provost and President of East Stroudsburg University. He has served as interim Vice-Provost and Dean of the Graduate School. Dr. Cardelle earned his Bachelor of Science degree in Biology and Latin American Studies at Tulane University, his master degree in Public Health from Boston University, and his Doctorate in International Studies with a concentration in comparative health policy from the University of Miami.

Mariana Chilton, PhD, MPH, is an Assistant Professor at the Drexel University School of Public Health and the Principal Investigator for The Philadelphia GROW Project – a nutrition and growth initiative for children and their families (www.growproject.org). She is Co-Principal Investigator of the Children’s Sentinel Nutrition Assessment Program (www.C-SNAP.org). Dr. Chilton investigates the health impacts of hunger and food insecurity among young children aged zero to three.

Michelle Renee Chyatte, MPH, is a doctoral candidate at the Drexel University School of Public Health. She has her BS in journalism from Kent State University and MPH from the Consortium of Eastern Ohio Master of Public Health. Prior to entering public health, she worked as a reporter for NPR focusing on health policy and politics.

Dennis Gallagher, MA, MPA, is an Associate Professor of Health Management and Policy at the Drexel University School of Public Health. Prior to coming to Drexel, Mr. Gallagher had a 27-year career with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in management and policy positions. Mr. Gallagher was the principal investigator on Drexel’s studies to assess the feasibility of creating departments of public health in York and Dauphin Counties, Pennsylvania.

Bernard D. Goldstein, MD, is Professor of Environmental and Occupational Health and the former Dean of the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public Health. He is a physician, board certified in Internal Medicine, Hematology and Toxicology and a member of the Institute of Medicine (IOM), the American Society for Clinical Investigation, and the Collegium Ramazzini. He is Executive Director and former chair of the National Board of Public Health Examiners.

Edward Gracely, PhD, received his doctorate in Quantitative Psychology from Temple University in 1986 and has been a faculty member at MCP, now Drexel University, in the College of Medicine, since then. His research expertise includes the logic of multiple comparisons, statistics education, and ethical philosophy. He serves on the editorial boards of both Pain and Pain Medicine.

Deidre J. Holland, MPH, is an Instructor and Fieldwork Coordinator for the Graduate School of Public Health at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey. She earned her Bachelor of Science in Health Education and her Master of Public Health from East Stroudsburg University. Previously, Ms. Holland was at the Sussex County Department of Health and Human Services as the Practice Standards Partnership Coordinator under the Local Core Capacity Infrastructure for Public Health Emergency Preparedness grant and served as Chairperson of the County's Community Health Partnership.

Jennifer Kolker, MPH, is an Assistant Professor of Health Management and Policy at the Drexel University School of Public Health. Formerly, Ms. Kolker was the Assistant Director of Policy and Planning for the Philadelphia Department of Public Health and a Senior Policy Consultant for Public Works, LLC, a public policy consulting firm. Ms. Kolker was the principal investigator on Drexel's studies to assess the feasibility of creating departments of public health in Lancaster and Berks Counties, Pennsylvania.

Judith R. Lave, PhD, is Professor of Health Economics, Department Chair of Health Policy and Management, Director of the Health Administration Program, Director of the Pennsylvania Medicaid Policy Center at the University of Pittsburgh, and co-director of the Center for Research on Health Care at the University of Pittsburgh. She received her PhD in economics from Harvard University. She was elected to the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Science and the National Academy for Social Insurance and is a distinguished fellow of AcademyHealth. She is on the Technical Advisory Group for the Pennsylvania Health Care Cost Containment Council. She is the author of more than 140 scientific publications.

Matthew G. Masiello, MD, MPH, is Director, Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention, Windber Research Institute and Windber Medical Center. He also serves as Project Coordinator (U.S.) International Health Promoting Hospital Network, World Health Organization Collaborative Center (WHO-CC) Copenhagen, Denmark.

Margaret A. Potter, JD, MS, is at the University of Pittsburgh holding positions in the Graduate School of Public Health as Associate Dean for Public Health Practice, Director of the Center for Public Health Practice, and Associate Professor of Health Policy and Management. Her professional interests include capacity building for public health at the state and local levels, training for the public health workforce, and enhancing public and private systems for emergency preparedness and disaster response.

PREFACE

“A Symposium on Public Health in Pennsylvania” is the first policy issue of Commonwealth. It is the fruit of a strong and productive partnership between the Pennsylvania Political Science Association and the Legislative Office for Research Liaison of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives (LORL). In this partnership, LORL has been given responsibility for developing policy issues of Commonwealth using the expertise of faculty members at the more than 100 colleges and universities affiliated with LORL and experts from government and private industry.

We are deeply indebted to Margaret A. Potter, JD, MS, Associate Dean and Director, Center for Public Health Practice, University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Public Health, who served as the editor of this Symposium. Her previous service to the state executive and legislature includes a year-long stint as a LORL Visiting Scholar and many joint policy projects between LORL and the School of Public Health at Pitt. Ms. Potter presently is a University of Pittsburgh Faculty Associate in LORL.

The authors of the articles in this Symposium were drawn from the academic, practitioner and consultive communities in public health and from the judiciary. Although the contributors were diverse, they were subjected to the same substantive and methodological standards.

Because this is a policy issue, the authors were asked to go beyond their basic findings and to offer policy recommendations derived from their research. These conclusions and recommendations belong to the authors alone and do not necessarily reflect the position, if any, of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association, LORL or the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

Special thanks are due to Barbara Stone, LORL Research Analyst, who did the proofreading and layout work for this volume, and to the House Republican Print Shop, especially Bill Lang and Bill Laughlin, for production and printing.
