

HISTORY / COMMUNITY ORGANIZING AND SOCIAL MOVEMENTS / POLITICAL SCIENCE AND PUBLIC POLICY / LAW AND CRIMINOLOGY

"Nobody else has comprehensively detailed the activities of tax protesters during the Great Depression, and Upham-Bornstein does this very effectively. This book will prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that taxpayer politics are a long-standing American tradition. 'Mr. Taxpayer versus Mr. Tax Spender' provides useful analyses of how these movements relate to trends in law and politics, as it provides a wealth of empirical details and richness for this relatively understudied topic."—Lawrence Glickman, Professor of American Studies at Cornell University, and author of Free Enterprise: An American History

"In the depth of the Great Depression, middle-class property owners spontaneously organized to 'raise hell and lower taxes.' This extensively researched, sensibly organized, and thoughtfully argued book presents nonpartisan political activism, judicial intervention into local government, and a pivotal moment in the fiscal history of the United States. It also reaches a surprising but utterly convincing conclusion: most tax revolters sought not a smaller government but a more efficient and progressive one."—Daniel R. Ernst, Carmack Waterhouse Professor of Legal History at Georgetown University Law Center, and author of Tocqueville's Nightmare: The Administrative State Emerges in America, 1900–1940

Linda Upham-Bornstein is Senior Teaching Lecturer in History at Plymouth State University.

Cover illustration: Photo 2393781 © Michael Mcdonald | Dreamstime.com

Printed in U.S.A.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Philadelphia, PA 19122

tupress.temple.edu

TEMPLE

UPHAM-BORNSTEIN

"Mr. Taxpayer versus Mr. Tax Spender"

"Mr. Taxpayer versus Mr. Tax Spender"

TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATIONS,
POCKETBOOK POLITICS, AND THE LAW
DURING THE GREAT DEPRESSION

LINDA UPHAM-BORNSTEIN